National Women's Political Caucus
Two Largest SF Women's Groups Endorsed Reilly this Week

(San Francisco, CA) Democratic candidate for the 12th Assembly District, Janet Reilly, today announced the endorsement of the San Francisco chapter of the National Women's Political Caucus (NWPC). This week, the two largest women's groups in San Francisco endorsed Janet Reilly: San Francisco Women's Political Committee (SFWPC) and NWPC.

The National Women's Political Caucus is a grassroots organization dedicated to increasing women's participation in the political process and creating a women's political power base to achieve equality for all women. NWPC recruits, trains and supports pro-choice women candidates for elected and appointed offices.

Janet Reilly said, "We have had quite a week – and I am grateful for this tremendous vote of confidence from the two largest women's groups in San Francisco. In a state that is losing women representatives because of term limits, the leaders of NWPC have been working to make sure that we elect qualified women to the Assembly. That's why it is such an honor that they are standing with me in the fight for the bold reforms that will make a difference for Bay Area women."

Janet Reilly has also received the endorsements of a majority of the SF Board of Supervisors, Assemblyman Leland Yee, SEIU, the Sierra Club, the San Francisco Fire Fighters Local 798, City Attorney Dennis Herrera, State Controller Steve Westly, SF for Tomorrow, California Faculty Association, SF Tenants Network and the San Francisco Women's Political Committee.
